The terms - Lightness and heaviness are philosophically, spiritually, physically and technically contradictory and complementary at the same time. The balance or tension between these two 'poles' is an important aspect of life. We could emphasise three main components of a product which co-exist – The skeleton, the organs and the skin. Considering this, we could question if a «good design» is finding the balance between these three components? Does questioning weight and the lightness mean establishing a relation between the minimum and the maximum? «Less is more»?

The goal is to create a metaphoric installation, a sculpture and then transform it to a functional furniture or architectural piece. As a final result human scale models should be built.

Eredmények:

Human scale furniture or architectural models or prototypes.

A kurzus ajánlása:

Taking the course is excellent opportunity to learn a new design approach from an internationally recognized designer.
